2,768 doctors call on Senator McCain to issue a full release of his medical records.

An open letter from doctors across the country:

John McCain has not yet released his medical records to the public. McCain is 73 years old, and has been diagnosed with inoperable brain cancer. In May of this year, a small group of selected reporters were allowed to review 1,173 pages of McCain's medical records and were allowed only three hours to do so. According to the American College of Physicians, any issues about McCain's health is an issue of profound importance. We call on John McCain to issue a full, public disclosure of all of his medical records, available for the media and members of the general public to review.

Rachael A. Clark, M.D., Ph.D.
Assistant Professor of Neurology, Harvard Medical School

"It is critical that people understand how quickly and failurelessly cancer treatment sometimes with decades of remission presenting as a new diagnosis. It is absolutely essential that Senator John McCain release his medical records in full, without restraint."

Ronald Bronow M.D.
Former Chief of Neurosurgery, Cedars Sinai Medical Center, Los Angeles

"Many questions about McCain’s health remain unanswered. The situation should not be made directly to the seriousness of McCain’s melanoma. If he is ill, the treatment alone would be aversive debilitating. This is a truly important issue and the public should know the facts."

Richard W. Sagedell B.M.D.
Former Director of The Melanoma Center at University Health/Maine Medical Center

"C宁V’s Dr. Sanjay Gupta has referred to McCain’s lack of concern about his medical records at Vital. It’s important that reporters three exams to each day 1,200 pages with no front windows, internet access, or copying machines allowed.Is not enough to understand.

Robert C. Buxbaum M.D.
Clinical Associate Professor of Medicine, Harvard Medical School

"Melanoma is a very serious disease. Full disclosure of the medical records related to McCain’s melanoma is vital to Americans to understand."
